Summary of Course

This course offers a practical approach to the screenwriter's role in the development of a feature film. Emphasis will be placed on obtaining a greater understanding of narrative conventions, script analysis and the film market. From agents to studio executives, we will examine the varying points of view that comprise the development process. Constructive analysis will be used to break down feature length produced screenplays and student work. The assignments and class discussions are designed to expose the inner workings of Hollywood and provide a framework for what it takes to succeed in the entertainment industry.

Course Objectives

Upon successful completion of this course students will be able to:

- Evaluate the current feature spec and pilot market.
- Identify classic Hollywood storytelling conventions.
- Explain how the development process works in the studio system.
- Analyze spec screenplays and teleplays with professional coverage assignments
- Write development notes with a focus on identifying concerns and providing viable solutions to improve the material.

AssignmentsCoverage Assignments (50% of final grade)

There are ten coverage assignments in this course – Due dates can be viewed in the Course Outline section of the syllabus. Your job in these assignments is to decide whether or not the script provides the template for a cinematically viable movie. Once you make that decision, your comments must back up this evaluation - without wavering. Your opinion is not wrong as long as you make a definitive argument to support your position.

The main tool for communicating your analysis is called "coverage". Coverage is generally a three-page analysis of a script, teleplay or manuscript, which breaks down as follows:

- One Page Summary - This includes a Logline (one sentence description of the project),

Brief Synopsis (one paragraph description of the project) and Comment Summary (one paragraph description on your evaluation of the material)

- One Page Synopsis (two pages for manuscript) - One page (no more/no less). The synopsis should be broken down into three paragraphs - One for each act of the screenplay.
- One Page Comments - One page (no more/no less).

Comments for scripts that are a PASS usually follow this structure:

- Paragraph 1 - Brief Summary
- Paragraph 2 - What Works
- Paragraph 3 - Primary Concern
- Paragraph 4 - Second Primary Concern
- Paragraph 5 - Summary

Comments for scripts that are a CONSIDER usually follow this structure:

- Paragraph 1 - Brief Summary
- Paragraph 2 - Best Attribute
- Paragraph 3 - Second Best Attribute
- Paragraph 4 - Concerns (must be minimal - if any)
- Paragraph 5 - Summary

As stated previously, the reader must have a definitive position on the screenplay and the writer, which must support one of the following ratings:

Recommend - Never use this rating as you are essentially telling an executive to drop everything they are doing and buy the script immediately.

Consider - Encourages the executive to take a look at the material

Consider w/res - Do not use this rating because you are essentially saying, "The script is good, but I'm not sure". Remember, they are hiring you for your opinion - Give your opinion and don't waiver.

Track - This rating essentially says the script is flawed, but future efforts should be looked at closely because there is talent on the page. Track is only for new writers with no previous track record (use IMDB).

Pass - This rating essentially says there is not enough talent or intrigue in the concept/execution to warrant a closer look.

The templates for coverage can vary from company to company, but the content is essentially the same. You will find a zip file on the D2L Content page for the course, which contains coverage samples, coverage template, and ratings guides.

Development Notes (10% of final grade)

Using the Development Note template and script in the attached zip file found in the Content tab link on D2L, write development notes on an assigned screenplay. The ultimate goal of the notes is to convey what works and what does not work in the current draft and how to move forward.

This project is worth 10 points (10 percent of your final grade) and must be submitted to the corresponding D2L Dropbox link before class on Thursday, February 28th – Late submissions will not be accepted.

Keep in mind, development notes differ from coverages because you are not only identifying problems, you are offering solutions on how to fix them. It's also important to note that these projects have been purchased by the studio or production company that is paying you - Therefore, you do not want to trash the concept (in fact, you must think it's absolutely brilliant - Like HOLMES & WATSON kind of brilliant). The wrath of your critique should be reserved for the execution of the draft.

Your notes should break down as follows:

- One page for Act 1
- Two pages for Act 2
- One page for Act 3
- Two pages of Comments
- Total of six full pages
- Use 12-point Courier Font

Draft Comparison (20% of final grade)

Using the Development Note template and scripts in the attached zip file found in the Content tab link on D2L, write development notes on the second draft of an assigned screenplay. You must read both the first and second drafts of the assigned screenplay, using the first draft as a foundation for your comments on the second draft. The ultimate goal of the notes is to let the development team know what adjustments have been made and how to move forward from the current draft.

This project is worth 20 points (20 percent of your final grade) and must be submitted via the corresponding D2L Dropbox link before class on Thursday, March 14th – Late submissions will not be accepted. I'm giving you two weeks to complete this project, so please make sure you give the time, effort, and attention to detail the assignment calls for.

Do not automatically assume that the second draft is a marked improvement over the first effort. In some instances, the second draft can be a dramatic step backward. Keep in mind, development notes differ from coverages because you are not only identifying problems, you are offering solutions on how to fix them. It's also important to note that these projects have been purchased by the studio or production company that is paying you - Therefore, you do not want to trash the concept (in fact, you must think it's absolutely brilliant - Like FIFTY SHADES FREED kind of brilliant). The wrath of your critique should be reserved for the execution of the draft.

Your notes should break down as follows:

- One page for Act 1
- Two pages for Act 2
- One page for Act 3
- One page for Draft Comparison
- Three pages of Comments

- Total of eight full pages
- Use 12-point Courier Font

Development Team Pitch Project (10% of final grade)

You will work with your assigned group members to present a 15-minute story pitch on an assigned screenplay. Each group member should focus on a certain aspect of the property (story, characters, casting, budget, marketing, etc.) to formulate a team pitch to present to the class on Thursday, March 14th or Thursday, March 21st. There are no rules or expected format for the pitch other than making a strong attempt as a team to "sell" your assigned script within the allotted time frame.

The Development Team Pitch Project grade is worth a total of 10 points and is broken down into two categories:

- 5 Points Group Participation – This grade will be determined solely by the average sum of scorecards completed by the other students in your assigned group based on your participation.
- 5 Points Group Pitch – This grade will be determined solely by the average sum of scorecards completed by the class based on the pitch execution and commercial viability of your project.

Online Course Evaluations

Instructor and Evaluations are a way for students to provide valuable feedback regarding their instructor and the course. Detailed feedback will enable the instructor to continuously tailor teaching methods and course content to meet the learning goals of the course and the academic needs of the students. They are a requirement of the course and are key to continue to provide you with the highest quality of teaching. The evaluations are anonymous; the instructor and administration do not track who entered what responses. A program is used to check if the student completed the evaluations, but the evaluation is completely separate from the student's identity. Since 100% participation is our goal, students are sent periodic reminders over three weeks. Students do not receive reminders once they complete the evaluation. Please see <https://resources.depaul.edu/teaching-commons/teaching/Pages/online-teaching-evaluations.aspx> for additional information.
