Summary of the Course

This analytical course examines the screenplay's evolution to the screen from a writer's perspective. Students will read feature length scripts of varying genres and then perform a critical analysis and comparison of the text to the final produced versions of the films. Storytelling conventions such as structure, character development, theme, and the creation of tension will be used to uncover alterations and how these adjustments ultimately impacted the film's reception.

Learning Outcomes

- Students will be able to explain, in well-written prose, what a work of art is about and/or how it was produced.
- Students will be able to comment on the relationship between form and content in a work.
- Students will be able to contextualize a work of art. They will be able to do so with respect to other works of art in terms of defining its place within a broader style or genre. They will also be able to contextualize a work of art in terms of contemporaneous aesthetic, social, or political concerns, discussing how these might shape the work's reception and how that reception might differ amongst various peoples and historical periods.

Final Project Assigned: You've spent the past 5 weeks as a Script Reader for a production company and today you got a major promotion. You're now a movie executive. You have 4 scripts to choose from as your next movie. Choose one and write an analysis using the storytelling conventions we have discussed in class.

The analysis should not be a linear retelling of the script's plot. Use the language we learned in this class. You must discuss the narrative devices employed throughout to build a cohesive and engaging narrative. Write a 5-7 page analysis of the project as to whether or not you would green light this movie and why.

Due next Tuesday.

COURSE POLICIES:

Attendance:

Each week's class consists of a lecture & a screening. Your attendance is mandatory.

For the purposes of this class, an absence is defined as either not showing up for class or showing up 15 minutes after class has begun. All absences will result in a reduction of the attendance/participation grade.

Assignments:

Reading assignments must be completed by the date to which they are assigned in the syllabus. Reasonable deadlines are given for completion for each assignment. Consequently late assignments will not be accepted. (Late assignment = F)

Exceptions:

A.) Medical emergency. You must contact me within 24 hours of the assignment due date and submit support documents within 48 hours of the assignment due date.

B.) Personal emergency. If you miss an assignment deadline because of any other reason besides a medical one, you must submit compelling evidence supporting your excuse within 24 hours of the assignment due date.

Examinations:

There are no exams given in this course. You will be graded on your written work and class participation.

Plagiarism:

Plagiarism on assignments is a serious offense and earns the student a failing grade for the class. There are no exceptions to this rule. If you are in doubt about the definition of plagiarism, consult your student handbook. Course Lectures/Reading Assignments: Lecture presentations will occur weekly. In addition to the screenings, the screenplay readings are an integral part of the course learning. BOTH SOURCES ARE NEEDED.

Content Changes:

Depending on time factors, the assignments projected for the term may require alteration or rescheduling, as well as the lectures.

Please bring either your laptop or something to take notes with for each class.

Assignments should be typed and double-spaced in 12- point font. All assignments are due at the beginning of class.

Sexual Harassment:

The policy as specified in the student handbook will be adhered to in this class.

Any incomplete request must be made at least two weeks before the final, and approved by the Dean of the College of Computing and Digital Media. Any consequences resulting from a poor grade for the course will not be considered as valid reasons for such a request.
